

ABSTRACT

A transdermal drug delivery patch with an array of spatially organized reservoirs. The invention provides greater penetration of drug into the skin compared to current transdermal drug delivery systems, and facilitates the delivery of drugs that are presently refractory to transdermal delivery due to high molecular weight.